FRANCE WILL SHOW GERMANY SHE IS IN EARNEST

By Associated Press.

PARIS, Jan. 8.—Occupation of Essen by a small force is slated for Thursday morning. Belgian and Italian engineers and technical experts will accompany the French but only Belgians will contribute to the force of occupation.

By Associated Press

PARIS, Jan. 8.—Premier Poincare will inform parliament Thursday regarding his policy toward the Rhur district. Ths was decided upon at today's council of ministers. "France is going just far enough in its action in the Ruhr distret to show Germany she s in earnest," he said today in official circles. France and Belgium have two hundred and fift rthousand troops on the Rhine and all but sixty thousand will be available for any use Marshall Foch might have for them.

ENGLAND WANTS FAIR BUSINESS SETTLEMENT

Chancellor of Exechequer Declares They Want Terms Which Will Produce Least Disturbance in Trade Relations.

By Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 8.—Great Britain wants a fair business settlement of her five billon war debt to the United States on such terms as will produce the least possible disturbance in trade relations of the two countres, Stanley Baldwin, British Chancelor of Exechequer, declared to day in an address before a joint meeting of the British and American debt funding commission. "We are not here," he said, to ask favors or impose on your generosity. We want a fair business settlement, a square deal, that will secure for America repayment of the last cent of those credits which the United States goverument established in America for us, their associates in war."

LOUISVILLE 1923 CHARITY BUDGET IS SHORT $46, 498

By Associated Press.

LOUISVILLE, Ky. Jan. 5—Louisville's charities are threatened with a shortage in their budget of $46,498, according to a statement of the Welfare League, through which collections of thirty organizations are handled. The figure set for 1923 activities has fallen short of collection that amount, it has been announced.

The total asked in the recent drive for the year's budget, arrived at by totaling the requests of the participating charities was $409, 083. The amount collected, $362, 585, is but 88.6 per cent of this, according to the Welfare League.

Other cities where centralized charity drives have been held have gone well over the established quota, directors of the local organization declare, deploring Louisville's failure to meet the request. "Civic pride, a pride in the welfare of its needy and unfortunate, should enable the Louisville Welfare League to care for all who need aid," the statement setting forth the deficit declared.

Twelfth Night, Once Famous Jubilee Day, Is Now Almost Forgotten

Only in the title of one of Shakespeare's comedies is heard today the echo of a jubilee which was once second only to Christmas itself in importance. Twelfth Night, the sixth of January, slips by in this twentieth century without so much as a goblet of wine clinked to its passing.

In Elizabethan England, and for a century after, the twelfth day after Christmas was called Old Christmas, or Little Christmas, and was celebrated by an outburst of revelry such as could be fond only in Merrie England. It marked the end of the Christmas cycle.

The holly and mistletoe were stripped from the staircases and candle sconces and thrown into the wide fireplace in the hall of the manor, to burn merrily, while a row of apples sputtered on the hearth and mulled ale circulated among the company.

A huge cake was baked for the occasion and cut with as much pomp as a modern wedding cake. A suckling pig roasted with an apple in his mouth and currants in his eyes formed the more substantial part of the feast. The church festival of the twelfth night is called Epiphany and is the feast of the manifestation of Christ in human form. It is a survival of a pagan ceremony observed on the anniversary of any deity upon earth.

The most curious rite by which Old Christmas was honored, however, was observed by the farmers. Throughout the rural district, bands of men visited the fields at midnight on the Eve of the Twelfth and bilt a circle of twelve small fires. Around these they danced a solemn dance, while invoking the good will of the gods of the harvest to increase the year's yield.

ENGLAND WINS IN FIGHT AGAINST FLIES

By Associated Press.

LONDON, Jan. 8—The reduction of number of house flies from myriads to a comparatively few has been accomplished in England through sanitation and health propagandh, according to a statement by Dr. E. Halford Ross, medical assessor at the Ministry of Pensions.

Dr. Ross toured the British Isles last summer, and in those places thousands of flies, they were conspicious by their absence, he declares. Some out of the way villages and farm houses still sheltered the grubs and insects, but their locations were not numerous.

There has been a great decrease on the figures of infant mortality, as compared to 1911, and the improvement is credited by Dr. Ross to the relative absence of flies.

"MERCHANT OF VENICE," GIVEN AT L. M. U., GREAT SUCCESS

"The Merchant of Venice," presented by the Elizabethan Players under the direction of Mr. and Mrs. Pierre Pelletier, made a tremendous success at the Lincoln Memorial University Friday night. This was the third number of the Lyceum course.

Each of the characters of the favorite old Shakespearan play was portrayed in an exceptional manner and special credit is due Acille Angline and Pierre Pelletier for their portrayal of the roles of Bassanio and Shylock, respectively.

The cast in its entirety follows:

Antonio, ...Robert Winton
Gratian, ...Samuel Baron.
Bassanio, ...Acille Angline.
Portia, ... Mrs. Pierre Pelletier.
Nerissa, ... Harriet Rudensey.
Shylock, ... Pierre Pelletier.
Lancelot Gobbo,..... Robert Winton.
Old Gobbo, ... Samuel Baron.
Jessica, ... Harriet Rudensey
Lorenzo, ... Robert Winton.
Salanio, ... Acille Angeline.
Tubal, ... Samuel Baron.
Duke of Venice, ... Samuel Baron.

GIBBONS TELLS OF SLAYING OF NOFFSINGER

Says Murder Was Perpetrated at Instance of Victim's Wife—Taken to Owensboro Saturday for Safe Keeping.

Slayer Formerly Boarded at Gibbons House

By Associated Press.

LOUISVILLE, Jan. 8.—Jailer Thomas Dover today ordered a special watch kept over Ollie Gibbons, thirty four, confessed slayer of Gus Noffsinger, Henderson, Kentucky Coal Mine Manager. Officials feared Gibbons might attempt to take his own life. Gibbons admitted Sunday night that he killed Noffsinger with a hammer the night of Dec. 30, in Henderson. He was arrested, taken to Owensboro for safe keeping and Saturday night brought to jail here. Deputy Sheriff Mike Abel returned to Henderson last night, requesting that Gibbons be held here until the date of his examining trial or at least until feeling against Gibbons subsides. Gibbons was formerly a boarder at the Hoffsinger home. He asserts he slew Hoffsinger at the instance of Mrs. Noffsinger.

JOE RALSTON'S CAR STOLEN; FOUND SOUTH OF KNOXVILLE

A Lexington car belonging to Joe Ralston was stolen in front of T. H. Campbell's store on Cumberland ave. Saturday night between 7 and 9 o'clock. The car was located nine miles south of Knoxvile yesterday where it had been stuck in the mud and abandoned. The driver of it has not been apprehended.

According to the reports, there were five or six men in the Lexington and a Ford car when the former became lodged in the mud, they abandoned it and went on south in the Ford which is believed to have been stolen.

It is said that a stranger was on Cumberland avenue looking at the different cars and commenting on their respective values a short time before Mr. Ralston's car was stolen. Mr. Ralston is not certain that he left the auto locked.

Mr. Ralston has offered a fifty the guilty party or parties and Chief P. E. Ball has offered another fifty. Mr. Ralston will go to Knoxville within a day or two and get the car, which is reported in good condition.

STILL FOUND NEAR HERE SATURDAY; TWO OPERATORS TAKEN

Prohibition officers on a raid Saturday found a 60-gallon copper still near Middlesboro with 600 gallons of distilled beer and 400 pounds of granulated sugar. Its proprietors, E. V. and Bill Shackleford, were arrested and taken to Pineville, where they are held in default of bond, with preliminary hearing set for Jan. 10. The still, beer and sugar, together with the house in which they were found, were burned. Officers who made the raid were: W. H. Green, revenue officer from Barbourville, and Ben Gibson, of Pineville.

HARLAN NEGRO, LONG MISSING FOUND BEATEN TO DEATH

HARLAN, Jan. 6—A gruesome murder was discovered when the body of Dan Acey, a negro from Georgia, was found Tuesday morning at Cherriet covered with slabs at an old saw mill. The coroner's inquest found that the man had come to death from having been horribly beaten and finally shot twice. Acey had not been seen since Christmas.

When found his body revealed the fact that his neck and an ankle were broken, his head horribly beaten and bullet wounds in his back and neck, one shot evindently having entered his mouth. Without a doubt the murdered man had put up a good fight for his life. His hands were badly scratched and torn, evidencing this.

People of the community are of the opinion that the murder was the result of a gambling party held at the old saw mill near where Acey batched. Only the day before was pay day and the negro is said to have drawn a fairly good envelope.

BONNER TELLS HIS FIRST DOSE OF COUEISM

Scientist Appeals To Unconscious Self Which Presides Over Functions Of Organism And All Actions

SELF CONFIDENCE GIVEN AS KEY TO HIS CURE

(By Milton Bronner)

NANCY, France, Jan. 8.—The outstanding thing in the autosuggestion clinics of Emille Coue is that there is no privacy.

Once in a while there is an exception. If someone is suffering from something that would cause real embarrassment to discuss aloud, the patient is permitted to write down what is the matter with him or her and hand the slip to Coue.

He tells us that in each of us there is a conscious and an unconscious self. If we compare them, we find that while the conscious self has a very unreliable memory, our unconscious self has a really marvelous memory which registers, even without our will, the slighest events, the most unimportant facts of our lives.

As our unconscious self presides over the functioning of our organs by means of the brain; a queer thing happens—if it believes a certain organ functions well or badly that organ does really then function well, or badly.

This unconscious self not only presides over the fuctions of our organism but over the accomplishment of all our actions.

This unconscious self is called imagination and it makes us act even in opposition to our will. In any conflict between imagination and will, the former always wins.

Creates an Appetite

"Now," says Coue, "tell yourself that all the words I am now going to pronounce will be fixed in your brain, will be printed, engraved, encrusted there; that they will always stay there; and that without your wishing it or knowing it, you yourself and organisms are going to obey.

'So now I say to you: Every day, three times a day at your usual meal times, you will be hungry, you will eat with great pleasure and without overeating.

"You will masticate your food slowly so as to transform it into a kind of paste before you swallow it.

"In this way you will easily digest your food and so will feel no discomfort or pain of any kind in your stomach or intestines

"You will as a consequence assimilate your food and your body will make use of it to manufacture blood, muscle, force, energy In a word—life.

No Medicine Needed.

"Your body will throw off the waste material without medicines of any kind. Every night you will enjoy deep, tranquil slumber, without nightmares and you will wake up feeling cheerful and ready for your day's duties.

Furthermore, if you are sometimes sad, or worry, or look at the black side of things, from henceforth you will stop it and, instead, you are going to be cheerful.

"You will no longer be impatient or ill tempered.

"You will be patient, you will always be master of yourself and things which formerly annoyed or worried you will do so no longer.

"I now add that your organs are functioning well. Your heart beats normally and your blood circulates as it should. Your stomach, intestines, lungs, liver, kidneys and bladder are all functioning properly.

Need of Self-Confidence

"If up do the present time you have lacked confidence in yourself, this distrust will disapear and give place to confidence, based on this force of incalculable power which is in each one of us.

"This self-confidence is absolutely some reasonable thing, or when you have to perform a duty, think always that it is easy. Make the words 'difficult, 'impossible,' I cannot,' disappear from your vocabulary.

"Say to yourself instead, 'It is easy and I can.' By considering a thing easy, it becomes so for you, although it might seem the reverse for others You will do it quickly and well and without fatigue, because you have done it without effort."

Coue said all this and a good deal more in a monotonous but soothing voice. It cradled us all into drowsiness from which we emerged only threee" and told us now to open our eyes. Then he once more took up his discourse, chiefly upon the necessity of our repeating his famous formla:

"Tous les jours, a tous points de vue, je vais mieux en mieux."

Which in English goes:

Every day, in every way, I am getting better and better."

getting better and better."

FRANCE FIGHTING DILUTION OF WINE

By Associated Press.

PARIS, Jan 8—Preventing retail and wholesale dealers from watering their wine is one of the problems of the internal revenue department of the French government. Every drop of water introduced into wine means just so much less revenue to the government. Also it is argued by the department of agriculture that the consumer of wine has a right to a pure product, if he wants it, and should be protected. Furthermore, the consumer is apt to put some water in the wine after he gets it home, if only for economy's sake, and it is evident that if he is sold diluted wine in the first place, the government will be defrauded just so much more.

Before the war, when wine was very cheap in France, dilution was unheard of, but during the last year, out of 10 472 samples of wine taken from suspected dealers, 4326 samples were found to have been tions for fraud were obtained.

In order to protect the good name of French champagnes, there have been many arrests recently for misrepresenting sparkling wines for champagnes Any real champagne is always labelled with that word on the bottle, it is explained, and the purchaser can protect himself when he orders champagne by looking for the word "champagne" both on the bottle and on the cork. If this word is not there, then he is drinking a substitute.

LITTLE WESTER BOY SUCCUMBS TO SCARLET FEVER

Wallace Wester, 21-months old son of Dan Wester, ded at their home on West Glouchester avenue at 4 o'clock yesterday afternoon. The child contracted scarlet fever about two weeks ago from the effects of which it succumed yesterday. He had a large number of friends who will mourn its death. KY. THRIFT WEEK TO BE OBSERVED

Begins Jan. 17,. Benjamin Franklin's Birthday, Under Direction Of Y. M. C. A.

By Associated Press

LOUISVILLE, Ky. Jan. 8—National Thrift Week, beginning January 17, the birthday of Benjamin Franklin, will be fostered in Kentucky this year, as usual, the State Young Men's Christian Association in co-operation with the National Thrift Committee of the Y. M. C. A and over forty other civic, commercial educational and religious national organizations, according to headquarters of the state Y. M. C. A here. The purpose of Thrift Week is to stimulate individuals to thing straight and act wisely in regard to personal money matters in the realm of earning, spending and giving.

One of the objectives of the 1923 thrift week program is to enroll 500.000 families in a Budget League, pledged to manage their incomes on the budget plan. According to George T. Amerson, industrial Y. M. C. A. secretary for Kentucky, the Kentucky Budget Club already has an enrollment of something like 700.

The thrift week observance in Kentucky will be carried on through the agency of the district "Y" secretaries working in the state, and through organized campaign work on the part of Y. M. C. A. city associations in co-operation with other civic organizations working to the same end.

The National Thrift Week program is based on the following ten economic principles; work and earn; make a budget; record expenditures; have a bank account; own your own home; carry life insurance; make a will; invest in safe securities; pay bills promptly, and share with others.

The state Y. M. C. A. will give out the budget expense book, in which all records of expenditures and savings for he year may be kept, free of charge to those who desire to enroll in the budget club. Application may be made through Y. M C A. secretaries.

The special days of Thrift Week are as follows

January 17—Wednesday: Bank Day. January 18—Thursday; Budget Day. January 19—Friday; Life Insurance Day. January 20—Saturday; Own Your Home Day. January 21—Sunday; Share With Others Day. January 22—Monday: Pay Bills Promptly Day January 233—Tuesday; Make a Will Day.

PLAN LIQUOR CLEAN-UP FOR NEW YORK CITY

"Padlock" Clause Invoked Permits Government to Close Public Houses Guilty After Receiving Injunction.

MANY NATIONALLY KNOWN PLACES UNDER SURVEILLANCE

By Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 8.—Stringent application of "padlock" prohibition laws are to be invoked in an effort to further clean up the liquor situation in New York. It was said today a number of nationally known public houses were included in the liquor observation. The "padlock" clause permits the government to close hotels and restaurants violating the Volstead act after they have been served with injunctions.

CHAMPION MEAT CUTTER TO PERFORM

By Associated Press.

LEXINGTON, Ky., Jan. 8—Farmers and their wives who come here for the annual Farm and Home convention to be held at the College of Agriculture Jan 30 to Feb. 2 will have the opportunity to see the worlds champion meat cutter in action, according to an announcement by those in charge of the program for the event.

J. P. Phillips, president and general manager of the Birmingham Packing Company, Birmingham, Ala., and holder of the world's record for speed in dressing a beef carcass, who provided one of the main features last year, will appear on the program again this year for a series of lectures and demonstrations dealing with the dressing of mutton and beef carcasses, and the different cuts of beef and mutton.

Mr. Phillips, who was born in Derbyshire, North Wales, came from a family of Welshmen who had been in the livestock and meat business for a number of years with the result that his boyhood ambition was to dress a steer quicker than any man living. After learning the rudiments of his father's business, he came to America in the spring of 1882 and was employed by a Chicago store coming to America he had acquired considerable skill in dressing beeves by counting the number of strokes it took to dress a carcass and soon after becoming affiliated with the Chicago concern, he dressed two steers in nine minutes and fourteen seconds, thereby establishing a world's record that has stood since then.

Mr. Phillips' talks and demonstrations on the program this year are being planned to be of interest to women as well as men. He not only show how mutton and beef carcasses are dressed and cut up but will also explain the difference between good and inferior cuts and show housewives at the meeting how to recognize a prime cut of beef or mutton when they see it on the butcher's block.

MIDDLESBORO PHARMACY IS RAIDED

Deputy Sheriff Gastineau and Dr. Davies Arrested for Unlawful Possession of Liquor

The Middlesboro Pharmacy was raided Saturday afternoon by revenue officers and Deputy Sheriff W. A. Gastineau and T. C. Davies, its proprietors, were arrested for unlawful possession of liquor. The officers found a small quantity of liquor on the prescription counter and ten cases of half-gallon fruit jars in the store which they declare had contained moonshine liquor.

Gastineau and Davies were released under $300 bond each, and their preliminary hearing was set for Jan. 9, at Pineville.

A THOUGHT

And he said unto them, Take heed and beware of covetousness: for a man's life consisteth not in the abundance of the things which he possesseth.—Luke 12:15.

The first principle of all human economy, individual or political is to live with as few wants as possible, and to waste nothing of what is given to supply them.—John Ruskin.

SCARCITY OF HOUSES

Middlesboro needs more residence houses.

This condition is one of the outstanding features of the town to the newcomer. It is indicative of prosperity and growth in a way, and yet shows that we are lagging behind other cities in the race for more population. The shortage of residences and the crying need for them shows that we have wonderful possibilities for growth. But no city will ever be any bigger than its number of houses, for these are its frame work, it's skeleton.

A lady informed us today that she had been looking for a suitable house or suite of rooms for more than two years without result. Similar complaints can be heard almost daily.

Middlesboro needs a building boom that will transform unsightly vacant lots into beautiful and substantial residence houses, that will dot our bare and rugged hillsides with neat cottages and bungalows.

Visitors who have the remotest idea of locating here should be greeeted by real estate and property owners and made to believe that of all the fair garden spots of earth, this is the one that nature has planned for them. Individuals and families living here in cramped and unsatisfactory quarters should be encouraged to own their own homes.

Every time a reliable citizen takes up his residence in our midst we have made an entry on the credit side of our municipal ledger.

By allowing the housing shortage to prevail we are striking at the very roots of growth and prosperity. We believe in the old idea that a man's home is his castle whether it be a cabin or a palace, that the family fireside is the most sacred and most powerful institution we have. By encouraging the erection of more residence houses to the end that useful, contented families will be attracted to the city, we will be doing an act that will maternally aid the growth of the city.

Let us all talk "more houses" until the land-owners "loosen up," put their property on the market and start the building boom. We should not be satisfied until the air is filled with the ringing sounds of the carpenter's hammer and the vacant places with esthetic homes.

WHAT YOU LIKE

A girl who clerks in a 5-and-10-cent store sends this letter: "Why is it that some invisible force seems to keep me chained to my present job, when what I really want to do is act in the movies? I am getting well in the thirties. The bloom is leaving my cheeks. I try to be practical and sensible. But, by keeping my ears open and my mind busy figuring things out I learn that I am much in the same boat as every one else. No one seems to be able to do what they want to do. Why is this?"

To this girl clerk, we answer:

The question you ask has been asked by every grown-up since humanity began to exercise its power of reasoning. And there seems to be no answer except that fate of destiny has much to do with our careers.

George Ade, who is such a genius as a genial satirist that future generations will study his fables in slang as our generation studies "Rabelais," always wanted to write heavy "stuff." Maybe you remember the American Magazine's interview with George, in which he expressed his bewilderment because he seemed forced to write humor instead of philosophy or tragedy.

Another case is Eddie Foy, comedian, whose foremost ambition always was to play Hamlet.

The reader will apply it to himself—to the thing he wants to be, the life he wants to live, but cannot. It is as invisible hands of destiny thrust you away from culmination of ardent desire.

The trail, as always in philosophy, leads nowhere, common sense brings most of us to a certain degree of contentment by making us realize that we probably are doing what we intended to do.

You see an able lawyer, proud of his ability to repair a clock. He says: "I was cut out to be a fine Mechanic." Deep in his heart he knows he is kidding himself—that law is his natural field.

This law, however, holds good only when we are definitely established in the rut through which we are destined to spend most of our mature years.

Often we are doing the wrong kind of work and yearn for something else. If fitted for the something else, ambition will make us find a way to get into the line we like.

When it comes to day-dreaming, to things we yearn for but are unwilling or unable to attain with our powers, we generally are like vaudeville actors a booking agents describe them: "When they can sing, they want to want to sing."

Adventures of The Twins

By Olive Roberts Barton

BUSTER CINNAMON BEAR was asleep for the winter.

Nancy and Duck and Dusty Coat, the dwarf Sandman, had tucked him in and covered his up.

Then things began to happen.

He was wakened with a bump. He had been dreaming that he was on a toboggan-sled having a nice whizzy ride down a steep hill when bump—it was all over!

Suddenly a complaining voice said. "Say! Who do you think you are, crowding in like this without being asked! Move over!"

"Huh!" grunted Buster. "I didn't ask to come here and I'm just as crowded as you are. Where am I, anyway?"

"Well, I declare!" said the voice. "Say fellows, this teddy-bear wonders where he is. Ha, ha! That's a good joke."

"Teddy-bear! I'm no more a teddy-bear than you are," retorted Buster. "And I'd thank you kindly to tell me where I am."

"Well if you are no more a teddy bear than I am, you are a teddy-bear just the same, for I'm a teddy-bear myself," said the other. "And we're both in a counter in a toy store. But as it is night, the store is closed and the lights are out and we are both covered with a big cloth. There were six bears in this counter before you came. You make seven. Now you know all about it."

"Hoop de doodle!" cried Buster. "Am I really a teddy-bear, stuffed with sawdust and sewed up at the seams? And I have shoe-buttons for eyes 'n' everything? I've always wanted to be one so I could live in a house and play with the children and hear the music. What's that?"

"Hush!" said the other teddy-bear. "Its daylight now and the store is being opened. Soon they'll take our cover off and customers will come in and look around and buy."

"Will they buy me?" asked Buster.

"Perhaps," said the bear.

Just then the cover was lifted and a little girl with curs stood beside the shopkeeper. She looked over the bears, then picked up Buster. "I like this one best," she said.

"I wonder if I'm dreaming," said Buster happily as the little girl tucked him under her arm.

Washington Letter

Gillette's Thrills

WASHINGTON, Jan 8.—Thrills are few in the lives of case hardened politicians. Take, for instance, Frederick H Gillette, speaker of the House.

Gillette has to go back 58 years—to the time when he was 13—to find the big thrill of his existence. It came when as shortstop on the baseball team of the Woronoco (Mass.) Academy, he made the play that won the game from the hated Springfield rivals.

No such thrills, he says, comes in presiding over the plays of politics as executed by "the greatest legislative body in the world."

To see Gillette today you would not think that even as a boy he could stoop so low as to catch a "grass cutter."

He stands with a ramrod-like erectness. Dignity enshrouds him like an icy mantle.

He smiles, yes but it is a cool, proper smile.

His neatly trimmed beard, his white-piped waist coat, his form-fitting cutaway coat, his properly striped trousers all fit in with the dignity of his high office which he meticulously maintains.

A Mounted Dandy

Peter Goelet Gerry, the dashing young millionaire from Rhode Island who has represented the smallest state in the United States Senate for the last six years, has acquired a new title.

Gerry is called the Beau Brummell of the bridle paths," in tribute to the perfection of his horsey get-up when he goes for a canter through Rock Creek Park. No advertisement for a fashionable saddlery house ever was more complete in presentsenting the proper habiliments of the horseman.

By contrast, Senator Borah, known as "The Man on Horseback" of the senate, who probably rides more in the course of a year than any other half-dozen senators, is the worst garbed.

Handshake Passes

Smith Brookhart, newly elected senator from Iowa, is upsetting a lot of political tradition, not the least of which is the necessity in polites of a firm, hearty handshake.

Knowing Brookhart comes from the middle west where a good grip is almost niversal, one approaches him almost with trepidation.

His massively broad shoulders, his rugged physique, his large, strong hands prepare you to withstand the pressure of a vise, once he gets your mit in his.

You thrust out your hand, determined to get it over as quickly as possible.

Then, in a daze, you find yourself holding Brookhart's hand. It lies limply in your grasp for you to do with as you please, inert, relaxed.

How a man with a handshake like Brookhart's ever got elected to high office is beyond experts on political hokum. Can it be that the day of the political handshaker is passing?

Geede's Children

A diplomatic mystery, more intriguing than whether the United States is doing anything to get Europe on her feet, is the careful guardianship at all times thrown around the children of the British ambassador, Sir Aukland Geedes.

For one thing the children are never photographed. Washington photographers, eager for good copy, for the Sunday pictorials, society supplements and rotogravures, have sought in vain to secure "sittings."

Always there are polite but firm refusals.

And always when the children leave the shelter of the embassy residence it is in the company of some attache or adult attendant.

Threats of kidnapping by Irish sympathizers is one of the explanations suggested. And that seems as good as any.

BEGINNING TO SAG IN THE MIDDLE

An Iowa hen has broke the egg laying record and more than likely the rooster is crowing yet.

What a man has often has him.

Berton Braley's Daily Poem

HEROES

By Berton Braley

"My father!—Well, I guess if he
Should find some giants kidnaped me,
He'd foller 'em right to their cave—
My father's awful string an' brave!
An' when he caught 'em he'd yell Hey,
You let that boy go, right away!"
An' if they didn't—I tell you
My father'd break 'em plumb in two!
I guess he'd learn 'em to be good,
That's how he'd do—my father would."
"Your father! Aw, he ain't so grand,
My father'd lick him with one hand,
And if some giants was around
Why just the minute that they found
My father lived here—tell you what,
They'd run like fun until they got
A million miles away! They'd be Afraid to THINK of touchin' me!"
And thus two ordinary men
Of five foot six or eight or ten,
A little soft and fat and grog,
And commonplace in every way,
Are by their children's honest pride
Heroic figures, magnified.
A man must be a perfect zero
If to his kids he's not a hero.

THE ONE-MAN WOMAN

By Ruth Agnes Abeling.

BEGIN HERE TODAY

KATE WARD her husband.
DAN WARD, dead, returned to live with her widower father,
JUSTIN PARSONS. Then came
CHINATOWN ALICE, asserting that Dan was the father of her child,
DORTHY, and a little later fears of Dorothy's grave illness. Hoping to be of help, Kate visited Alice at the laundry of SING LOY, with whom Alice lived, but met with such a baffling tale of contradictions and seeming untruths that she returned, completely puzzled, to her father. Talking over the situation as evening fell, Justin and Kate were led by their dog,
MONK, to a lonely gully where they found the body of an unconscious man.

GO ON WITH THE STORY

An unintelligible sound escaped Justin Parsons as his fingers traced the damp, upturned face. Kate stood near him.

Her eyes had become accustomed to the darkness of the gully. They penetrated it and caught the white outlines against the dark of the ground.

"A man!" she half whispered. Then, "Is he dead?"

Justin felt along the inert body. He listened. At length:

"No, he's still breathing."

Asilence during which Justin beat over the figure.

"He looks pretty slight—think between us we could carry him over to the house? Ought not to lie in this damp much longer." Justin was talking half to himself.

Kate slipped her hands under the shoulders of the unconscious man, rested his weight a moment and then said:

'I think we could—let's try, anyhow. Getting up the hill will be hardest."

"We can skirt the hill. A little longer"—Justin had taken Kate's place at the man's head and was lifting the body—"but it would be easier."

They lifted the body and started around the hill. The unconscious man was scarcely over five feet five, and slender, but as the distance behind them lengthened, Kte staggered under the weight. The footing was uncertain. Darkness increased the difficulty.

As they walked, silence settled upon them. They could tell by the feeling of the fabric that the clothing the men wore was of good quality. The little they were able to discover of his appearance, in the darkness was that of a man with whom life had dealt gently, kindly.

As if by agreement, they refrained from talk of whom the stranger might be or what circumstances had crumpled him, unconscious, in the ravine.

It was not until they reached their own cottage that they talked.

"How do you suppose he came to be lying there all alone?" Justin voiced the question while Kate cleansed a cut at the man's temple and mixed a liquid which she held to his lips while Justin raised him.

"It is strange—I hadn't thought of that," Kate murmured. "If it had been an automobile accident, his car should have been somewhere near."

"Wonder how long he'd been there?" It was Justin's voice.

Silence again. Thee man on the couch was stirring uneasily. His lips moved but no sound came form them. At length he turned on his side, and enveloped slipped out of his pocket.

Kate picked it up. It was empty. She started to replace it and then hoping to learn something of the man, turned it over to look at the address.

It read:

"Mr. James Latham, Sullivan, Indiana."

'James—James!" Kate was speaking aloud, and she said I'd learn to call him Jim!"

"What is it child?" Justin was on his feet.

Kate passed a hand over her face. She swayed slightly.

DOINGS OF THE DUFFS — CHEATING THE MOVERS — By Allman

HELLO THERE, TOM! ARE THE MOVERS ON A STRIKE?
NO- JUST TAKING OVER A FEW THINGS TO PLEASE THE WIFE -
WELL, I GOT THAT STUFF OVER ALLRIGHT AND DIDN'T BREAK A THING - PUT THEM ALL IN A CLOSET AND LOCKED IT-
THAT'S FINE! SAY, TOM I HAVE A FEW MORE THINGS I WISH YOU WOULD TAKE TOO- I'M AFRAID THEY MAY GET BROKEN
I THINK I'LL CALL UP THE MOVERS AND TELL THEM THEY NEEDN'T COME TOMORROW- THAT I DID IT ALL MYSELF!
THIS IS THE LAST TRIP- YOU WON'T HAVE TO MAKE ANY MORE
IT'S A WONDER THAT SHE TRUSTED THE PIANO TO THE MOVERS- I MIGHT JUST AS WELL HAVE CARRIED THAT OVER TOO-

Don't Worry, Lowbrows! The Stigmas Gone

Famous brows. Top to bottom: An anthropoid ape, Babe Ruth, Charles P. Steinmetz, Warren G. Harding, Henry Ford, Thomas A. Edison, Jack Dempsey.

CHICAGO, Jan., 8.—Pa, cut this out and save it and the next time Ma calls you a dowbrow because you're not over keen about her Monday Afternoon Intellectual Uplift Club, show it to her.

The height of one's brow has nothing to do with ones intellectual capacity. That's stated on the authority of Dr. W. J. Hickson, director of Chicago's municipal court phychopathic hospital.

People with low brows are the best business men and organizers. That's on the authority of Jessie Alen Fowler, phrenologist.

Says Dr. Hickson:

"Don't measure a man's brow—measure his hatband. If the size of the hat is below six and one-half or much above seven and one-half chances are he is an inferior.

Forehead No Index

"Foreheads are no reliable index High foreheads are misleading because their owner's heads are often filled with other things than brains.

"Low foreheads can hold as many brain cells as high ones. And it's the development of these cells that counts. Men with low brows have come to the front in history where those with high brows have failed.'

And says Jessie Allen Fowler:

"One with a high brow is reflective, a theorist, a dreamer, a philosopher—like Woodrow Wilson.

"One with a low brow is scientific, observing, practical, governed by rule and accurate in statement—like Charles Darwin.

"A very stupid person may have a very high brow.'"

ALCOHOL MENACES FRANCE, REPORT

By Associated Press

PARIS, Jan. 8.—What France should do with her excess alcohol has become one of the burning in the republic. While France has no prohibition movement under way, she is seriously troubled by the economic aspect of an excess production of wine, and especially alcohol.

A senate commission reported recently on the problem. It commented on prohibition in the United States; pointed out that France's liquor and wine exports had been reduced by such prohibition, and then made the flat statement that there could be no question as to the desirability in France of reducing the human consumption of alcohol, that alcohol today was a natural danger to the republic.

Seeking ways to meet the economic difficulties presented by the actual situation, the commission in of alcohol be used nationally as a fuel by mixing it with benzine, gasoline and other like substances in proportions ranging from ten percent up.

It is proposed to run automobiles, locomotives and factories with this mixture, and at the same time save part of the money now spent abroad for coal and other oil fuels. Many experiments have been made, and large prizes offered for the best mixture.

The principal factors in the alcohol problem are that there is possibly a smaller consumption of alcoholic drinks and that France produces far more alcohol than she can herself normally consume.

However, it is pointed out that nearly three-fourths of France's population gains its livelihood, direct, whether the people are engaged in agriculture or commerce.

France, the report shows, is now producing an average of 4billion gallons of wines and alcohols yearly, of which is obtained an annual internal revenue of about a of pwards of half a billion francs yearly.

The commission reached the conclusion that one way to reduce drinking would be to increase the taxes on wine and liquors. France has been drinking more and more for a hundred years, because beverages were so cheap. Fifty years ago was one and one-half quarts, today it is three quarts.

The final conclusion of the commission is that France's 22,000,000 gallons of pure alcohol, produced from grain, beet sugar and molasses, should be diverted from certain prestion, to general use as a fuel.

YEAR SATISFACTORY FOR EQUAL RIGHTS

By Assosiated Press.

CHICAGO Jan. 8.—Legal disabilities for women in the United States have been reduced to "a few slivers in the body politic which can be extracted with a fine needle", according to Mrs. Catherine Waugh McCulloch, a member of the Chicago bar and chairman of the committee on uniform legislation of the National League of Women Voters.

"The needle was applied to many disabilities through laws enacted 1921, and although 1922 was not regularly a legislative year in most states, considerable legislation to establish equal rights was enacted." Mrs. McCulloch stated.

The legislation of 1922 which was regarded as conforming with the program of the league, has been tabulated for the League by Mrs. Carina C. Yarnnig, an attorney of Fort Wayne, Ind., and may be summarized as follows:

Federal act providing independent citizenship for married women; Georgia, removal of common law disabilities relative to holding office or performing civil functions; Kentucky act facilitating jury service by women, age of consent raised to eighteen, with abandonment made felony for which extradition may be demanded, women made eligible to office; Massachusetts, women made eligible to office; New Jersey, mothers' pension law amended; Rhode Island, committee created to determine to what extent statues abridge women's rights; Virginia, property rights act passed, mothers' pension act amended, suffrage act amended to provide that for purposes of voting the residence of a married woman shal not be controlled by residence of her husband; commission on simplification of state and local government authorized

The League opposes blanket legislation.

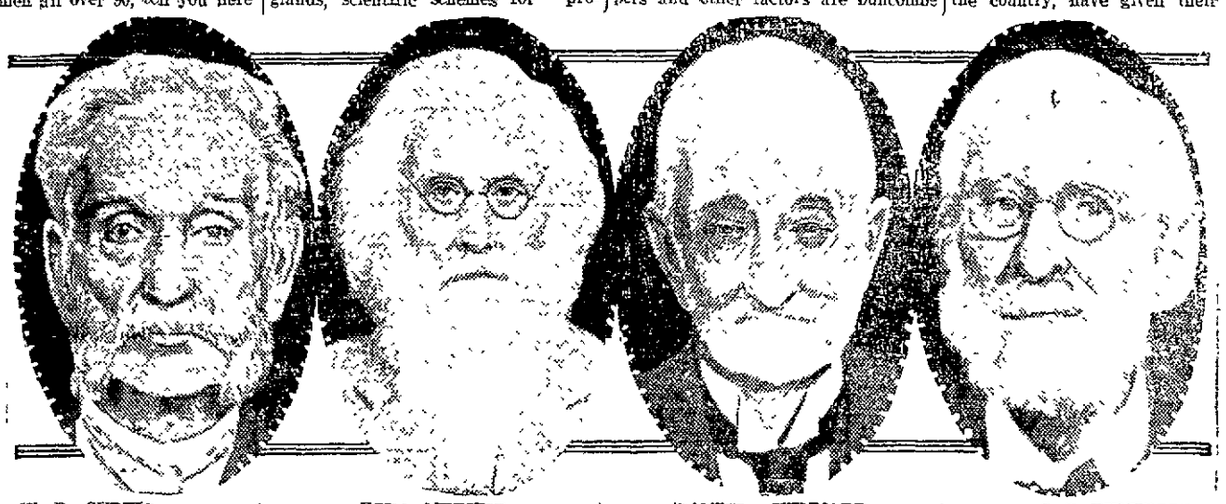
MODERN WOMEN, PROLONGED LIFE, ALL BUNK, SO SAY THESE VETERANS OVER 90!

The first hundred years aren't the hardest!

Four men all over 90, tell you here that they're perfectly satisfied. So satisfied, in fact, that they agree that glands, scientific schemes for prolongng life—into a second hundred years, perhaps!—and modern flappers and other factors are buncombe and nonsense.

These men from various parts of the country, have given their views



W. R. CURTIS
Of Milford, Ill., Ninety-one

Glands, and all that talk about extending life are all foolish monkey business.

Live a sane even life without any excesses and you may live to be a hundred.

Much beyond that no man can go. It isn't natural.

If grown-ups would pay less attention to these crazy ideas and more to their children we might be better off.

I believe that girls are all right—if they are brought up right.

But so few of the modern girls are.

Most of these live on the farm where they are taught useful work from their very childhood.

EZRA MEEKER
Of Oregon, Ninety-two

The mothers are to blame. They should set their daughters washing dishes, instead of letting them run around wild.

I went across the country with an ox team and saw the West built up by men and women who were helpmates to each other. The girls could weave, cook, sew, bake, work.

Mention these duties to a girl today and she laughs. She is the modern woman.

Maybe she knows about these newfangled scientific ideas.

I don't.

But I know that you can't buck nature.

No man can live beyond his time, doctors or no doctors.

DANIEL KENNARD
Of Brooklyn, N. Y., Ninety-four

Let nature take its own course.

The more we try to agitate it, the worse living becomes.

I never took any stock in these prolongation-of-life experiments, and I'm not dying young.

But I bet that most of the scientists who are dabbling with the work will pass away long before the age that I go.

Lead the simple life, have plenty of outdor work, abstain from tobacco and liquor and you needn't worry your end coming too soon.

But don't let any of the young flappers annoy you. They are too fresh, and aggravating, and should be squelched—if that is possible.

C. P. BENEDICT
Of New York, Ninety-One

Of course the girls are always nice. But the old-fashioned girl of my day were far better than their sisters are today.

They were less bold, less forward, perhaps—but lots more wholesome.

Give me one of the old-timers of the 60's any time.

They never worried about their age. They knew that if they lived a clean, healthy life they would live to ripe old age.

But now they seem to be worrying about prolonging life by means of science

It's all just rot.

Happiness
(New York Times)

In silent woods to hear the sound of waves,
To watch the fir tree tops against the sky,
Upon the gay moss of their roots to lie
And know that just beyond, the ocean laves,
The rock shore that, cool from deep sea caves,
It breaks upon the pebbles and without pause
Breaking again in full and strong octaves;
To lie and feel the sunshine's comforting
While tender green things grow about my feet,
And shy wood birds to modest mates do sing
A song of love, is happiness complete—
To lose the world and its stern questioning,
Here where the air with balsm fir sweet.

TODAY'S RECIPES

PIES AND PIE CRUST

America is the pie-eating country of the world.

By pie I mean two pieces of crust, baked round with a filling of fruit or custard mixture between them.

The only one-crust pies are those filled with squash custard, pumpkin or lemon, and, occasionally, stewed fruit, with strips of paste across the top—"cross-barred," as it is called sometimes

Cooks differ as to the best raw material for shortening pie crust.

Flaky and Puffy

Lard and butter make for an excellent and delicious-tasting crust. Oils may be used but they do not result in flaky or puffy pastry.

Some cooks keep every ingredient very cold; some make delicious paste with boiling water.

There are three kinds of paste which the housekeeper may make—plain, puff and chou.

Plain paste is used for pies and simple tarts; puff for patties and small pastries; chow paste is better known in the form of cream puffs or eclairs.

Plain and chou paste are made easily; puff is more difficult.

The English favor the open pie, called a tart, and it is advisable to serve this kind oftener in the family. It is an excellent way to use canned and preserved fruits.

Invert the Plate

The pie plate is inverted and covered with the plain paste, pricked and baked. Remove the crust baked thus and fill with any kind of fruit or a mixture of fruits, or plums and cherries. A very good filling is made with stewed prunes, dates, cranberries or raisins. One may put a meringue on top, or serve whipped cream with the tart.

The French use the chou paste for many desserts. It may be baked and served with stewed fruit, or filled with whipped or made cream.

Any paste which is cooked without the filling is likely to be lighter, as there is less danger of the juice soaking in.

Pastry, in a broad sense, includes not only pie and paste desserts, but also fancy breads and cakes.

WHAT'S GOING ON IN THE WORLD

By Charles P. Stewart

The year 1923 enters with one acute, pressing, very dangerous "situation" for the world to face, and another one of the chronic type, with perhaps even greater possibilities of danger but not so desperately urgent, to be dealt with.

The former is the Christian powers difference of opinion with the Turks over what as known as the "Near Eastern question."

..This is the problem that the international conference at Lausanne, Switzerland, has been struggling with. It started as a discussion intended to lead up to a settlement of the issues for which the last war between Turkey and Greece was fought, ending in the Turks' overwhelming victory. It has degenerated, however, into a wrangle between the Turks and English and this wrangle, diplomatic thus far, threatens to wind up in a fight, a fight that might drag in a great many more countries.

The latter 'situation" revolves around the financial and economic tangle among the wartorn European nations. Today this isn't an urgent problem, too, would be entirely wrong, but is isn't quite a matter of days, hours, even minutes, like the Near Eastern danger. Troops and warships aren't actually on the move yet, and there's sufficient ground for hoping they wont be, in western Europe, as in the Near East.

The deadlock, if it proves to be such, at Lausanne, is over two things.

1. Mosul
2. The "capitulations."

Each Says Other Side Obstinate

Mosul is a vilayet, province or state in Asiatic Turkey, on the Persian frontier, about 400 miles east of the island of Cypress, at the extreme eastern end of the Mediterranean. To this valayet England received a "mandate"(that is tosay was given the rulership) by the League of Nations. The Turkish Nationalists, who are in control now, say the valayet passed out of Turkish control because the then Sultan whom the Nationalists have since deposed, was completely under the allies thumb and agreed to anything they dictated. They repudiate the arrangement and demand the return of Mosul. The English refuse to surrender it.

"Capitulations, which in the present case relate to judical matters, mean this:

A certain country or countries which have citizens or interests in some other country less advanced, in their opinion, than themselves, refuse so far as their citizens and interests are concerned, to abide by that country's laws or the decisions of its courts. They insist the differences of opinion concerning their citizens and interests in that country shall be settled n accordance with their own laws and by their diplomatic representatives or by the courts of their own creation in the country where they are living or are situated. This is know as "extra territorial jurisdiction." Naturally no country likes it At worst it may be subjct to abuse. At best it's a great humiliation.

It used to prevail in Turkey, as it does still in China, but the Turks abolished it during the war. Now the allies backed by the United States, demand its re-establishment. the Turks refuse.

The Turks say the Lausanne conference is tied up because England so stubbed about Mosul. The allies are so stubborne about the "capitulations"

Without paying any compliments bad rlers, it must be said that there's one weakness in the other countries' position, to which disinterested observers haven't failed to call attention.

Mosul is valuabl because of its vast oil deposits. The "capitulations" are important because of the outsiders' property interests in Turkey.

Every other issue, like the welfare of the Christian subjects of the Turks, the European negotiators at Lausanne are willing to discuss amicably, but when oit comes to their own material claims, like oil and the arvantages they enjoy under the "capitalations," they're immovable. And the Americans, though only onlookers at the conference, are giving moral support to the position.

The situation is so serious that the Turks are concentrating troops on the borders of Mosul and the English are rushing warships to Turkish waters. The Greeks, fighting, are moving military forces toward Thrace, in Europe which both the Greeks and Turks claim.

The outlook is not hopeless, but very threatening.

Secretary of State Hughes has finally explained what the United States Government is trying to do toward improving the European economic situation.

Seek Economic Terms

As has been pointed out before the central question is:

How much is Germany able to pay in the way of war damages?

This has been thrashed over and over again by diplomats r epresenting the interested countries. They can't agtee. The allied diplomats insist that Germany is able to pay more than the German diplomats admit she is able to pay.

The American idea is to take the question away from the diplomats—to make it a business question, not a political one. It is Secretary Hughes view that business men would be guided solely by business considerations—not what Germany ought to pay, but what she can pay. Diplomats, he seems to think, can't get the thought of what she ought to pay out of their minds, and discussing that is time wasted, because it makes no difference what she ought to do if its impossible.

Theroetically neither Germany nor the claimnants against her would be bound to accept the decision of the business experts, but Secretary Hughes believes the world's public opinion would force them both to do so if the figure named evidently was a just one.

It yet remains to be seen whether this plan will be adopted.

Senator Borah, who wanted President Harding to call another conference to discuss international military and naval armament limitation, has withdrawn his suggestion, because it was explained to him that he was embarrasing this other plan, outlined by Secretary Hughes.

STATE HORTICULTURAL SOCIETY TO MEET IN LEXINGTON

By Associated Press

LEXINGTON, Ky., Jan. 8—Arthur R Rule of New York, general manager of the recently organized Federated Fruit and Vegetable Growers' Marketing Association, will be the principal speaker at the sixty-Seventh annual meeting of the Kentucky State Horticultural Society here January 31 and February 1, according to an announcement sent out today by Ben E. Niles, Henderson, secretary. Mr. Rule is a native Kentuckian and stil owns his old home farm in this state according to Mr. Niles.

The Federated Fruit and Vegetable Growers', organization was sponsored by the American Farm Bureau. Before taking up this work as general manager of the organization Mr. Rule was connected with the North American Fruit Exchange. Mr. Rule will speak on the marketing of farm products at the morning session Wednesday, Jan. 31.

W H. Stites, of Henderson, president of the Kentucky State Horticultural Society, will retire this year after having served two years as head of the organization. Mr. Stiles will deliver an address at the opening session January 31. Secretary Niles also will make a report for the past year at this session.

TO DARKEN HAIR APPLY SAGE TEA

Look Young! Bring Back Its Natural Color, Gloss and Attractiveness

Common garden sage brewed into a heavy tea with sulphur added, will turn gray, streaked and faded hair beautifully dark and luxuriant. Just a few applications will prove a revelation if your hair is fading, streaked or gray. Mixing the Sage Tea and Sulphur recipe at home, though, is troublesome. An easier way is to get a bottle of Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound at any drug store all ready for use. This is the old-time recipe improved by the addition of other ingredients.

While wispy, gray, faded hair is not sinful, we all desire to retain our youthful appearance and attractiveness. By darkening your hair with Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound, no one can tell, because it does it so naturally, so evenly. You just dampen a sponge or soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one small strand at a time; by morning all gray hairs have disappeared, and, after another application or two, your hair becomes beautifully dark, glossy, soft and luxuriant.

TRY SULPHUR ON AN ECZEMA SKIN

Costs Little and Overcomes Trouble Almost Over Night

Any breaking out of the skin, even fiery, itching eczema, can be quickly overcome by applying Mentho-Sulphur, declares a noted skin specialist. Because of its germ destroying properties, this sulphur preparation instantly brings ease from skin irritation, soothes and heals the eczema right up and leaves the skin clear and smooth.

It seldom fails to relieve the torment without delay. Sufferers from skin trouble should obtain a small jar of Rowles Mentho-Sulphur from any good druggist and use it like cold cream.

PASSION PLAY WITNESSED BY 318,000 VISITORS LAST YEAR

By Associated Press.

OBERRAMERGAU, Jan. 8.—Performers in the year's Passion Play received an average of 18,000 marks for their services, according to the financial statement issued by the committee in charge. The sum represents about $2.25 at the prevailing rate of exchange.

The complete cast this year included approximately 1,000 persons, all of whom, as usual, were Oberammergauers Of this number 124 were soloists or had speaking parts. A large number of women and children were used especially in the mob scenes Anton Lang, who portrayed the part of Christ for the third time, is reported to have waived his rights to a higher share of the receipts in order that the average compensation for the participants might be increased

Tickets of admission produced an aggregate of 21,640,470 marks, the committee's statement shows, while 5,806 393 marks were realized on the sale of libarettos and photographs. The expenditures amounted to only 7,753,948 marks, having been kept comparitively low because little new construction was required, many costumes were in good condition from the 1910 season, and all necessary dyeing of old material was done gratis by a Munich firm whose manager is a resident here.

LEGION HEADQUARTERS GETS $25,000 FROM LANDIS

Indianapolis, Ind., Jan. 8.—American Legion national headquarters has received a check for $20,352.10 from Kenesaw Mountain Landis commissioner of organized baseball, as the Legion's share in the proceeds of the tie game in the last world's series in New York. Similar checks have been sent to the veterans of foreign Wars and to disabled veterans of the World War acording to a letter from Mr Landis.

The gift from organized baseball to the ex-service organization represents one-half of the proceeds of the third world series game. It was made with the understanding that it would be expended in the relief of disabled world war veterans. National Legion headquarters has announced that its share of the money will be used solely for sick and wounded veterans and that the machinery for its distribution will be authorized at the next meeting of that organization's national finance committee

THE UNIVERSAL CAR

INTERESTING FACTS

105,799 Ford Cars and Trucks Retailed in December

Approximately the same number scheduled for delivery this month

What Does This Mean?

This volume of deliveries to actual owners is entirely unprecedented for this time of the year.

It has taxed the manufacturing ability of the Ford plants working at full capacity.

It indicates a volume of business during the rapidly approaching months of "heavy demand" which will be far beyond the maximum production schedule which the Ford Motor Co. has set—

And that means a Ford shortage even more acute than the one which existed last Spring and Summer.

Dealers' stocks all over the country are low—there are no reserves to draw on to meet the demands for delivery—

There is no way in which dealer reserves can be built up, as deliveries have been made to customers as fast as Cars could be manufactured since last April.

The only way you can protect your desire to obtain prompt delivery of a Ford even at this time is to place your order immediately.

This emphasizes more strongly than anything we could possibly say the necessity of your making prompt arrangements with a Ford Dealer for the listing of your order, particularly if you are contemplating the purchase of a Ford Car or Truck for use this Spring or Summer.

We believe you ought to know these facts as they actually exist.
